How did the Fund perform during the reporting period?

- For the 12 months ended December 31, 2024, the Fund performed roughly in line with its benchmark.
- Overall, the global economy continued to expand, and consumer price inflation trended lower. That supportive backdrop set the stage for some Western central banks to begin cutting short-term interest rates this past summer. Volatility picked up toward year-end, but global stocks posted strong gains for 2024, with U.S. stocks faring even better.
- Financial stocks, which made up more than one-fifth of the benchmark at the end of the period, led the way. Industrials, technology, and consumer discretionary stocks also contributed. The biggest detractors were basic materials, telecommunications, and consumer staples.
